Financial deleveraging was substantially promoted

In 2017, the scale of social financing increased reasonably. According to the preliminary statistics, the annual increment of social financing in 2017 was 19.44 trillion, 1.63 trillion yuan more than that of the previous year, and an increase of 12% over the same period. The growth is basically in line with expectations, showing that financial support for the real economy is greater.

The results of financial regulation are expected to be stable, and the direction of social financing structure will change: 1. After the supervision, the actual leverage ratio of banks is significantly limited, and the overall supply capacity of the banking system to social financing is decreasing. 2. The non-standard and channel business mainly focuses on the real estate, financing platform and government restrictions (more than 70%), which is the main source of social integration. In the medium and long term, after the regulation, the total demand for financing will gradually shrink, and the structural differentiation will be obvious: the interest rate of real estate and small and medium-sized financing platforms will rise, and the interest rate of the industrial sector will be stable.
